Social Anxiety Group

The social anxiety group is a low-cost group program for people experiencing difficulties in social situations, such as public speaking, initiating or maintaining conversations, speaking to authority figures, attending parties, eating in public and many other scenarios.

What is the Social Anxiety Group?

People with social anxiety often feel that they will be criticized by other people or feel that they will say or do something that will humiliate or embarrass themselves. Some people with social anxiety also experience physical symptoms such as blushing, sweating, trembling, confused thoughts, muscular tension, stomach problems, and even panic attacks. The social anxiety group program caters for people suffering from mild to serious anxiety and is suitable for people who wish to better understand and control their fears within a small, supportive group environment.

Program Outline

The social anxiety group is a 12-week program that runs for 3-hours once a week. Participation in the program involves attending all sessions, as well as an initial interview.

The social anxiety group is a structured cognitive therapy program that centres on the relationship between faulty cognitions, the physiological symptoms of arousal and subsequent avoidant behaviour. The aim of the social anxiety program is to inform people about the causes and symptoms of social anxiety, including its behavioural, physiological and cognitive components. The facilitators focus on each participant's individual concerns and provide practical strategies to overcome situations in which anxiety may be aroused.

Eligibility and Application Procedure

To be a part of the social anxiety program participants should be aged 18 or above and will be assessed to determine the nature and extent of their social anxiety. This involves attending an assessment that can last anywhere from 2- 3 hours prior to program commencement.

Follow-up individual counselling after the program is available if required. Alternatively, if you would prefer individual counselling to the group program, this can also be arranged by contacting the Psychology Clinic's reception on 9214 8653 or email psychclinic@swin.edu.au

Fees

The cost of the social anxiety program includes an assessment fee of $25, plus a program fee of $445. This fee is payable prior to the commencement of the group and is non-refundable.
